

Centre for Latin American Studies (CLAS)
University of Kerala

CALL FOR APPLICATIONS
CLAS Junior Research Fellowship

Context

The Centre for Latin American Studies (CLAS), University of Kerala was established in 2015 with the intent of spearheading research and studies on Latin America and developing close bilateral ties between India and Latin America. For India, especially for the state of Kerala, the significance of Latin America lies in certain economic, political and cultural factors. The vast endowment of natural resources and complementary time zones in a globalised economy are strategically important in the economic sphere. Latin America is increasingly considered an important investment destination owing to its growing industrial and manufacturing strength and continuous improvements in ease of doing business and innovation. On the other hand, India offers immense opportunities for collaboration, trade, and investment for partner countries from Latin America. The population of Kerala has often extended a warm welcome to Latin America culturally, especially to its literature and sports. Latin America has a great influence on the socio-political, cultural and agricultural spheres of Kerala. Given the need for consolidating the relations between India and Latin America, the Centre for Latin American Studies has instituted Junior Research Fellowships (CLAS JRF) to identify and encourage research students whose work will support research in various areas of India-Latin America relations.
