The University of Kerala, Department of Biochemistry was first established as a division of department of chemistry in 1961 and was established as an independent department in 1970 .

Dr. P A Kurup was the founder professor and Head of the Department of Biochemistry.

The department has been a champion of excellence in teaching and research since its inception. The Department has gradually undertaken several externally funded research programs sponsored by national and international agencies. Several of these programs have also been carried out in collaboration with various research institutions and laboratories in India and abroad.

The thrust areas of research in the department are lifestyle diseases and phytochemistry. The research program has diversified into newer areas of research like structural Biology, Epigenetics Nanotechnology, Marine Biotechnology and Tissue Engineering. As part of the research expansion of the Department, Advanced Centre for Tissue Engineering (ACTE) was initiated in the Department of Biochemistry during 2015-16. This year is the Golden Jubilee of the Department.

It is our proud privilege and pleasure to invite you to the International Seminar on Recent Biochemical Approaches in Therapeutics (RBAT-VIII) to be held from 18-21 January, 2022 at Department of Biochemistry, University of Kerala, Kariavattom, Thiruvananthapuram, Kerala, India.

We promise you an exciting and informative scientific program that will feature interactive sessions by world renowned experts sharing their findings and experiences and talking about the new technologies. It will be a great opportunity for the participants to know and learn the research developments in the area. We are sure that RBAT VIII will be a memorable experience for all of us. With immense delight we welcome everyone to join this seminar to make it a grand success. We look forward to welcome you all in Trivandrum and urge you to mark your dates.
